Acknowledgments

The seemingly endless nights of hard work have come to an abrupt end. But the efforts would have been in vain but for a number of people who have contributed actively and passively towards my work. There are many people without whose support and help this dissertation would not have seen the light of day.

First of all I would like to extend my heart – felt gratitude to my supervisor, Dr. Saugata Bhaduri who led me to believe in myself and who was very patient with all my queries and confusions which I saddled him with, at odd and even hours. I cannot possibly thank him enough for teaching Contemporary Literary Theory, like only he could. He is the kind of teacher every student aspires to be.

Professor Kapil Kapoor has been a continuous source of inspiration to me.

Rawat ji and Bhagwati ma'am made the official work easier by being extremely cooperative.

I have to thank my dear friends, Janet, Namrata and Kranti for sailing in the same boat as me and not drowning. They have been around at all the odd hours of reckoning and beckoning. To dearest Janet I owe endless glasses of martinis for lending a patient ear to all my troubles. Shikha and Dolly did their bit by calling me every time I missed them. I would like to thank Anindita who took care of me as only an elder sister could. Nicholas has provided me with priceless moral support and clarity of thought whenever I was confused. Ravi makes me bless Alexander Graham Bell for his fascinating invention, everyday.

Finally, I would like to use this space to thank the people without whom neither this work nor I would have existed- my loving parents. Their unconditional love and support at all times has been the panacea for all my troubles. At the same time I would like to thank my bhaiyya and bhabhi for their affection.

In fond memory of Baba...
